VOLLEY OF HUMANITY

The football world last week witnessed two antipodal acts. The first was a product of apocalyptic imagery where extremists blew up Borussia Dortmund team bus, injuring a player and creating panic. Close on the heels of that grim incident unfolded a heartwarming gesture that reassured the faith in humanity: Borussia fans opened up their houses for the visiting Monaco supporters who were left stranded in the city.

Shan A S

This is the beauty of sports. The good samaritan acts in sports have a cosmopolitan presence. North Paravur, thousands of kilometres away from Dortmund, replicated a similar act albeit lesser in intensity. When the volleyball officials and fans in North Paravur harried the Kerala State Volleyball Association to ask the Volleyball Federation of India (VFI) to allot them the National Junior Championship, little did they know they were entering troubled waters.

To conduct or not to conduct

Just after they were given permission to conduct the event, trouble began to brew in the VFI. With factionalism putting spanner in the daily activities, the International body placed VFI under suspension. The feud in the national scenario had a ripple effect in the state association that finally led to formation of an ad hoc committee. With the VFI under suspension and state body crippled by infighting, the funds proved to be hard to come by. The volleyball fraternity in Paravur had two options. Either to drop the event or conduct it on their own.

"It was a painful moment. If we cancel the event, it would dash the hopes of volleyball enthusiasts in the area. If we go ahead with it, we have to find funds on our own. Finally we took the call and decided to host the event," Eljay Babu T, Kerala junior boys team coach and chief coordinator of the event, told 'Express'.

The decision

When the decision was taken to conduct the event, the next thought was how to arrange funds. The first step in this direction came through the formation of Paravur Sports Association which brought the current and yesterday's sportspersons from the locality under one roof. It may be a rarity that an association was formed to support a national event. Former India player and Customs and Excise assistant commissioner V A Meenden Nairia, who also hailed from Paravur, was appointed as the convener. The funds started trickling, mostly from Paravur residents.

"The current intregro in the federation dissuaded sponsors from investing in the event. The journey so far has been tough. Now we

Paravur's date with volleyball

Paravur for long had served as a conveyor belt for Indian volleyball, producing several internationals who made the country proud. Almost a dozen players from the locality played for India, while several others played for the state and department teams. The last big ticket event that Paravur had hosted was the Junior National Championship in 1979. The ferocious on-court escapades they had witnessed served as an inspiration, and a crop of youngsters got hooked to the game. The rest is history.

The journey so far had been tough. Now, we have pooled money from local residents. — K P Pramod Kumar, member, Paravur Sports assn

LET THE GAME BEGIN

23 boys team and 22 girls teams are participating in the tournament that began on Wednesday.

Courts are being used for the championship. The main court, however, has been prepared at the Civil Boys ISS, North Paravur. The venue has floodlights and temporary gallery which can provide seating for 7000 people.

4 schools are being used to arrange accommodation for the teams.

have pooled money from some local people," said an office-bearer of the Paravur Sports Association.

The pangs

The office-bearers have pegged the budget at around Rs 30-35 lakh. They expect the participation of around 500 players and 100 officials. "We have to take care of the lodging and boarding of the participants from the eve of the competition to a day after the final. It's a big task," said K P Pramod Kumar, a member of the Paravur Sports association.

Kerala, being the host team, we had to start their preparatory camps 10 days ahead of the event. Boarding and lodging for both boys and girls teams required a good amount and the cash-strapped state volleyball association was in a quandary. Then two families came up with an offer.

Saviour Angels

Sureshbabu, a businessman from Vasakkad and member of Paravur Sports Association, came to know about the plight of the Kerala team from his friends. An ardent volleyball fan, his son Sameeh had played the game before his untimely death at the tender age of 21. Six kilometres away from North Paravur town, Vasakkad has been an epicentre of the game and a tournament was organised in memory of Sameeh by his family under the aegis of an association named 'Nanava'. For Sureshbabu and his wife Omama, the game always evoked the memory of his son. Sureshbabu didn't think twice and opened the top portion of his two-storied house for Kerala girls team.

"My mother was very fond of the girls and she looked after them the way she cared for me and my brother," said Santhya Lesli, daughter of Sureshbabu and manager of Kerala girls team. Another family in Vasakkad took the boys team under their wings. Pramod Kumar said organisations and individuals in North Paravur also chipped in, donating rice and other essential goods to the organisers. To bridge the communication gap, ex-service men from North Paravur, who know Hindi, have volunteered to accompany the teams.
